

From The Editor...

Are your personal life and business life in alignment? The answer to that question is probably the most important response that you as a business owner will ever make!

If you know what having your personal life and business life in alignment is and what it means when your lives are aligned then you know what I am referring to. However, if your lives are not aligned or if you have no idea what having them in alignment means, then the course you are on will likely take many turns and the road will probably be pretty bumpy.

This process of aligning your personal life and your business life is certainly not a new concept, but it may be new to you, or if it isn't and you have not embraced it, now is a good time to give this process serious consideration.

How many times have you said, "Boy, I wish I had more time to spend with my family"? How often have you been sidetracked with what you thought was the greatest opportunity of a lifetime and once you got involved, you discovered you had no business chasing that rabbit down that hole?

Some business owners never take the time to address the big picture right in front of them and often wind up with a broken family life, a failed business or even worst --- both!

If you have finally decided that you want more out of your personal life and business life, I would recommend that you seek out an experienced business advisor, consultant or mentor with a financial or business background for your Company: Contact a Silver Fox Advisor. Remember, having experience on your side always helps.

We encourage you to visit our Website at www.silverfox.org or www.silverfoxadvisors.com to select a Silver Fox Advisor and also to learn more about the Silver Fox Advisors, our Associates and their businesses, as well as our great programs and community outreach endeavors. ♦

Richard T. Hendee, Editor
The Silver Fox Advisor

